Portfolio comments February 2023

The equity markets wobbled in February 2023 on mixed macroeconomic statistics and Q4 2022 earnings releases. The returns in the portfolio were driven by idiosyncratic factor amid the earnings season that gives hope that markets will be less driven by macroeconomic indicators in 2023. The largest contributors to the Fund's performance were Meta Platforms (for the fourth month in a row), NVIDIA and Money Markets. Meta Platforms announced better-than-expected results and committed to the "Year of Efficiency" to become a stronger and more nimble organization. NVIDIA continues to benefit from Artificial Intelligence (AI) development and provided a strong guidance for the next quarter. We decided to exit this position as our models do not support the current valuation level. It is also worth mentioning that an allocation to Money Markets makes sense in the current uncertain macroeconomic environment as the yield of these instruments increased from 2.5% in August 2022 to 4.5% as of February 2023. The portfolio suffered losses in Portfolio Hedges as put options that we own have lower strikes than the current trading levels. Amazon and Alphabet also detracted from performance due to the lack of positive updates on AI development and cost cutting initiatives that seem to be a market focus. We used this opportunity to add to both positions.

Risk factors

Equity Risk: Investing in equity shares means taking a stake in the performance of that company, participating in the profits it generates by way of dividends and any increase in its value by way of a rise in its share price. However, such equity shares may also depreciate in value and lead to substantial losses of up to the total amount invested should an underlying company file for bankruptcy.

- Currency Risk: The Fund may have multiple non-US Dollar currency exposures and such exposures will be unhedged. These nonUSD currencies may depreciate against the US Dollar and lead to losses.
- For a more detailed explanation of risks, please refer to the "Risk Factors" section of the Prospectus and Supplement.

Investment Policy

The Fund may invest (directly and/or indirectly) worldwide, in developed countries, in corporate securities and their associated derivative instruments. The fund's investable universe comprises companies that the manager identifies as being of structurally high quality and trading at attractive valuations. The Fund may also invest in money-market instruments (funds) and bank deposits.

Investment Strategy

The Fund will target securities of companies that satisfy various qualitative and quantitative criteria, whose characteristics include: competitively-advantaged market positions in cyclically-resilient industries, growing and predictable revenue and earnings, durable profit margins with pricing power, and operated by experienced and appropriately-compensated management teams. The Fund considers the following verticals to be its investment focus: cloud software and infrastructure, professional financial services, healthcare services, payments and industrials.
